Lynndyl is a small agricultural community that is sixteen miles northeast of Delta. Folklore relates one story for the name origin. Apparently, while the railroad was under construction and before the area was named, someone from Salt Lake City asked a telegrapher where she was. While trying to think of an answer, she noticed "Lynn Mass" printed on her shoe, so she answered "at Lynn" – so the junction now has a name. However, when an application was filed at the post office, a Lynn already existed in Box Elder County so "dyl" was added.
